ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Gender has been a dynamic site of activism and intellectual discourse over the past six decades. The persistent questioning of representation and stereotyping of gender roles has led to significant awareness regarding individual rights and the assertion of identity. While these efforts have produced considerable results and helped achieve some degree of empowerment for women, the dream of equity remains a far cry. Even as women have stepped out of homes to learn, earn and manage their lives, they still lag behind men due to less social mobility and a limited access to resources. Inequality persists in most societies and nations of the world, and women continue to be under-valued, under-paid and under-represented at all levels. It would thus be naive to overlook the need for rethinking issues of gender, equality and individual rights in the rapidly changing world of today. Additionally, in times where there exists a constant tussle between modernity and tradition, and fears of rights being misused looms large, it becomes all the more important to reassess matters of gender from a contemporary socio-cultural perspective.

The objective of the seminar therefore, is to stimulate a critical discussion regarding the prevailing gender-dynamics and to convey a broader and comprehensive understanding of women empowerment in the Indian context. A major concern of the seminar would be to deliberate upon alternatives to redress power imbalances so as to give women equal opportunity and means to realise their potential. The intention is to highlight the importance of women empowerment as a means to ensure gender equality and achieving socioeconomic growth for the nation as a whole. Simultaneously, the deliberations would also attempt to identify the road blocks that hamper the process of empowerment and suggest remedial measures. The seminar would also serve as an academic platform to rethink the process of gender sensitization and make it more inclusive. In other words, the seminar will serve to deliberate over ways and means of engaging and working together with men to achieve the goal of gender equality within the nation and the world at large.
